New Manuscript: Add/Remove Authors

The screenshot displays the EJOURNAL+ Author interface. On the left is a dark sidebar with a top section for the user 'alina schmidt' and a bottom section for manuscript management. The main content area is titled 'Entering Manuscript Information' and features a checklist of steps. The 'Add/Remove Authors' step is highlighted with an orange arrow and a yellow circle containing the number '1'. An orange callout bubble points to the 'Authors' information' section, which contains instructions and a form for adding authors.

Abstract

Submitting an abstract is required for submission.

Please enter the abstract of your manuscript into the text box below. The abstract may be cut and pasted from a word processing program; however, the formatting will be lost.

The abstract word limit is 100 to 250 words

Think of the jump from the world of radio, to the world of television. During the age of radio, people spent time by listening to music, stories, news and early formats of talk- shows. The capabilities of the days' technology were utilized fairly efficiently. When the television came around, although the technological capability was now much higher (allowing the transmission of images and opening up the space for visual storytelling) the early content remained very similar to those in the radio days. People would gather up around a table. They would read through the stories with texts and notes in front of them, as if they were in a radio show. The camera would generally be motionless.

Although the audio content was interesting, the visual content was static. Only in time, the visual content has started catching up to the technical capabilities of television. Slowly it started using "visual storytelling" to its full potential. The same logic applies to every other technological leap
