The screenshot displays the 'Journal Forms' editor. At the top, there are input fields for 'Title' and 'Content'. Below these is a rich text editor toolbar with various icons for text formatting (bold, italic, underline, text color, background color), alignment, and other functions. The main text area contains the text 'Click here to download Cover Letter' followed by a vertical cursor. Below the text area, there is a 'Path' field showing 'p » strong', a status 'Enabled', and a checked checkbox for 'Show in Main Menu'. At the bottom right, there are 'Cancel' and 'Save' buttons. Three yellow callout boxes provide instructions: one points to the 'Title' field with the text 'Enter the title', another points to the main text area with the text 'Enter the content of the page', and a third points to the 'Save' button with the text 'Click to Save'.

Sculpting super-fast light pulses

Controlling the properties of ultrafast light pulses is essential for sending information through high-speed optical circuits and in probing atoms and molecules that vibrate thousands of trillions of times a second. But the standard method of pulse shaping -- using devices known as spatial light modulators -- is costly, bulky and lacks the fine control scientists increasingly need. In addition, these devices are typically based on liquid crystals that can be damaged by the very same pulses of high intensity laser light they were designed to shape
